FRIDAY
February 26, 1915

THE BASEBALL CURTAIN GOES UP FOR 1915 AS PHILADELPHIA'S TWO TEAMS LEAVE FOR SOUTH TODAY

SUCCESSORS TO MACK'S FAMOUS $100,000 INFIELD—HOW WILL THEY SHOW UP IN COMPARISON WITH THE OLD QUARTET?
In order here, from left to right, are McInnis, at first base; Kopf, at third base; Lajie, at second base, and Barry, at shortstop. It will be their difficult task to measure up to the standard of what was conceded to be the greatest infield in the business. If the Mack infield, with Collins and Baker present, was estimated to be worth $100,000, what its value may be with Collins and Baker gone is a question that presents many angles.

THE PROPS AND MAINSTAYS OF THE REORGANIZED PHILLIES, WHO THE FANS HOPE WILL FORM THE NUCLEUS OF A FIGHTING BUNCH
"Pat" Moran, the new manager; Catcher Killefer, Right Fielder Cravath and Pitcher Alexander, as they appear here in order, compose a foursome whose worth and ability have been proved in many a contest. On them the fans depend as the foundation of a team that will once more put the Phillies back into their accustomed place in the first division.
